

Sealmatic Certifies For Good Manufacturing Practices: GMP Certification

A Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP) is a system for ensuring that products are consistently produced and controlled according to quality standards. Moreover, it is designed to minimize the risks involved in any pharmaceutical, food or beverages production etc., that cannot be eliminated through testing final product.

With an immense pleasure and pride, we are pleased to announce that we have been successfully certified for Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP) certification by the Codex Alimentarius Commission (CAC) Body, certifying that the mechanical seals manufactured at Sealmatic are compliant for equipment employed in the Food & Beverages sector as well as in the Pharmaceutical Sector. Sealmatic constantly adheres to the regulation proposed for GMP, by ensuring and managing the risks to the unsafe substances.

The reports provided by us in the audit process (report no. Q11041/2021) conducted as per TÜV India procedures, has been effectively confirmed for GMP certification, affirming that the mechanical seals manufactured at Sealmatic does not contain any unsafe or hazardous substances, and is complaint to the norms and standards proposed by Food Hygiene CAC/RCP 1-1969, rev. 4, (2003). In addition, the materials investigated for GMP, are been thoroughly inspected and confirmed that we meet all the necessities as characterized as per CAC.

Moreover, we are once again the only mechanical seal company in India which has the distinction of having the GMP certification. As such we work within the framework of the GMP directives, consequently we monitor the materials and processes continuously that go to manufacture our products and comply with any substance restrictions that are introduced via the above defined directives.
